SANGOMAR ON TRACK FOR FIRST OIL IN 2023

Woodside notes recent media reports stating that Senegal has been forced to delay its first oil and gas projects by up to two years because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Woodside reiterates that first oil from the Sangomar Field Development Phase 1 remains on track for 2023, in line with previous guidance.

Woodside and its joint venture partners took an unconditional final investment decision for the Sangomar Field Development Phase 1 and commenced execution phase activities in January 2020.

Since then, Woodside has taken early action to proactively manage the emerging impacts of COVID-19 on the supply chain and project schedule. We are working with project contractors, the Government of the Republic of Senegal and our joint venture partners to optimise near-term spend whilst protecting the overall value of the investment and deliver first oil in 2023.
